

Spartan Spark Fund offering no pay-back grants at University Of Tampa

Tampa, Florida University Of Tampa's John P. Lowth Entrepreneurship Center.

Students at The University of Tampa who have an up-and-coming business are eligible to receive a grant up to $1500 USD. Applicants must fill out a form attaching their business plans with their financial projections, detailed description of grant use, proposals from Third-Party vendors, a summary of the grants impact, and a recommendation letter.

One Accelerator program participant would use the grant to gain “Access to paid databases to propel my research and marketing efforts with quality data”. Another participant would use the grant for “Equipment to produce higher quality content for my clients and to put a CRM system in place”.

The John P. Lowth Entrepreneurship Center (LEC) is distinguished by its award-winning status and is a valuable tool within the Sykes College of business. This Building exemplifies a modern approach to entrepreneurship with its state-of-the-art design elements to enhance creativity, inquiry, introspection and innovative thinking and learning. Serving as a collaborative space, the Lowth Entrepreneurship Center unites aspiring student entrepreneurs, educators and industry professionals. This is key for innovative ideas and entrepreneurial ventures.

Our mission at The John P. Lowth Entrepreneurship Center is to provide a space that inspires creativity, curiosity and collaboration. We strive to create an environment where students, educators and experienced entrepreneurs can unite to create opportunity, develop ideas and launch ventures. We aim to push the next generation of business leaders towards success.
